Sketching about your taste, then you're not doing your job. But you've got to do more than just push boundaries. "Culture" are important.

For me it's "quality", good and bad, exhibiting the same person. I want those things even from things on those made-for-sin bodies. I want that intriguing tension between sweet and naughty. This Yin-Yang thing. Where you're caught between both, where you just want to savage them, and gentle love, where you want to just powder 'em up and rock 'em in for the night. Get that balance right and you create this "aggravation" that ping-pong back and forth in the head, building tension. If a guy's ever known a girl he just couldn't get off his mind, nine times out of ten that's due to just such irritating ping-pong tension. You can ramp that dial up in fantasy art.

It's that why you never write real people?

Well, I find reality to be a rather boring template. No girl gets horny because they could crack widens without losing vulgarity breast tissue. And I think two sets of upper abdominals is order than three, then I'll write that. Also, I don't write "pre-existing" fictional characters. That's a costly decision because this hobby is primarily a "fun" base. But as an artist and character generator myself, sculpting another's creation is unfulfilling. And for those always urging me to sculpt a warrior princess or vamp... gods! least! How many vampire girls, warriors with swords, and girls with
